Asian and Pacific Islanders are the fastest growing minority group in America. Yet one of the greatest challenges is finding information about these groups in publications which examine their health, disparities, immigration and acculturation challenges, health literacy, health education needs, policy implications, and responses to varied interventions in acute care and community settings. Asian/Pacific Island Nursing (APN) Journal is the only publication that assists researchers, educators, and practitioners meet this important challenge by focusing on bio-psycho-social-ecological-spiritual impacts on this population.

Created to fill the gap between nursing science and behavioral and social sciences, Asian/Pacific Island Nursing (APN) offers a forum for empirical, theoretical and methodological issues related to API ethnic, cultural values and beliefs and biological and physiological phenomena that can affect nursing care. The scope of the journal includes, but is not limited to:

- Methods, interventions, instrumentation, and educational techniques that are unique to this group.
- Theoretical foundations that increase understanding unique response to changes in health and illness.
- Bio psychosocial, spiritual, and ecological impacts on practice, education, and research.
- Policy issues as a result of rigorous research outcomes.
